Not illustrated. 1908 Excerpt: .usual scheme of absolute observations for land stations, 110 elaboration except in number of sets being attempted. A single declination value results from the mean of two scale readings magnet erect, four magnet inverted, and again two magnet erect and taking the necessary mark and magnet circle readings; such a single set takes about seven to nine minutes and in the field as many sets as possible over the day would be secured. Values of horizontal intensity depend upon a set of oscillations of ten differences of time for seventy or more oscillations followed by two sets of deflections at two distances and the usual four positions of deflecting magnet for each distance closing with second set of oscillations. Dip values depend on observations of both polarities in the usual four positions for each polarity. It should also be stated that the attempt was made by the Carnegie Institution observer to eliminate instrumental errors as far as possible by different orientations of the movable parts on the various days (e, g., different orientation of footscrews, readings on different parts of circle, etc.) Bauer, L. A. Results of magnetic observations made by the Coast and Geodetic Survey between July 1, 1903, and June 30, 1904. App. 3, Report 1904, U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, Washington, 1904. (196-198). CARNEGIE INSTITUTION STANDARDS. The provisional standards used by the Department in declination and dip are based on those of the Cheltenham Magnetic Observatory of the United States Coast and...
