This deposit, lying in a sag 800 above Salt Creek, probably represents a tributary of the main La Porte channel. A capping of basalt covers the Calaveras bedrock east of the gravel patch. The total downthrow on the northeast side is probably 520 . The first fault is exposed in the bedrock at the upper end of the La Porte diggings; here the downthrow on the east side is 55 , and the gravel beds are bent over the nearly perpendicular fault scarp.
